

I need your help.

Actually, a lot of people need your help. Beating a cancer diagnosis requires support from a medical team, healthcare workers, doctors, scientists and especially friends and family like you. That's why I'm asking for your help.

I want to do my part to stop cancer, which is why I'm completing the 2017 Tri for a Cure, a women-only triathlon, on July 23.

I'm not just swimming, biking and running, I'm working to help raise money to help beat this terrible disease and help support those suffering from it.

Whatever you can give— $50, $75, $100, or more— you'll be glad to know that 100% will go to fund cancer programs working to prevent, detect, treat and cure cancer. You can learn more about the organization behind this effort at www.maineccancer.org.

Please join in the fight against cancer by making a contribution today. In return, I promise to put everything I've got into finishing strong! Thank you.
